Wittenberg University

Welcomes Gay Alumni

Dear Editor,

s a gay alumnus of Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio, Lthe recent gay-friendly and anti-gay letters to the alumni magazine gave me a renewed interest in my participation in the university.

To my delight I found that there was a small but thriving Gay Straight Alliance (GSA) on campus and that the majority of the faculty and administration was moderately to enthusiastically in support of this group and its mission.

Consequently, I have been asked to serve as the alumni advisor to the GSA, a role that I happily accepted.

I am writing today to all GLBT newspapers nationwide to invite Wittenberg's gay, lesbian, bi-sexual and transgendered alumni and their friends, family, spouses, and partners to this year's homecoming.

Ironically, homecoming will be held on and around the weekend of October 11, which is National Coming Out Day!

I, along with the help of Wittenberg administrators, faculty, and GSA, will be hosting a reception for our gay alumni and their guests in the student union the morning of Saturday October 12 before the parade and game festivities.

This is the first time in the history of the university that Wittenberg has openly acknowledged its gay alumni.

Please give strong consideration to proudly attending this year's homecoming and our reception, either by yourself or with family and friends. For more information visit our webat www.FriendsofWittGSA.com.

Under The

Talk Radio Station Causes Waves

By Tami Miller MGW Staff

ime Magazine published (as the Time aran article on August 25, in which Sacramento was named by the Civil Rights Project at Harvard University, as "America's Most Integrated City". This article, titled "Welcome to America's Most Diverse City", discussed the issues that must be addressed in cities where there is no majority, but rather many minorities.

Time mentioned Sequoia Way, a middle-class neighborhood in the southern part of Sacramento where one is likely to come across many interracial couples and families, as well as the downtown area, where one might find "and Eskimo and a white punk" hanging out togeth-

There were also statistics, such as Sacramento being a city of 407,018 inhabitants (the greater Sacramento area having 1.4 million people), with 41% of those being non-Hispanic whites, 15.5% black, 22% Hispanic and 17.5% Asian/Pacific Islander.

Jack Armstrong and Joe Getty discussed the article on their August 27 morning radio/television show (on KSTE AM 650 and KQCA TV). The two Sacramento residents mentioned how hard it was to educate children when schools have kids speaking 70 different lan-

They also talked about the distinct neighborhoods in the city, claiming that even though Sacramento was fairly integrated, there were still some areas that were known for being of mostly one race or sexual orientation.

Armstrong and Getty used K Street (Lavender Heights) as an example of a predominantly gay area. Citing a statement in the Time article, they said that they had yet to see an Eskimo and white punk walking around together in the downtown area ticle journalists claimed to have seen). The talk show hosts also made a statement along the lines of "only foreigners and gays live in downtown. Gay foreign bums." and Mayor Getty de-Heather Fargo and her served conchief of staff, Chuck Dalldorf, responded to the show by asking the Capital Unity Council (a local group whose aims include reducing hate and celebrating diversity) to begin a letter-writing campaign to the FCC with the goal of revoking KSTE's broadcasting license.

The letter Mayor Fargo wrote to the Capital Unity Council stated that Armstrong and Getty had bashed immigrants, people of color, non-English speaking people and the gay and lesbian community.

Armstrong and Getty, upon seeing the Mayor's letter, thought her statements to be completely unfounded and misguided. They argued that they were attempting to have a meaningful discussion on the issue of diversity and on the concerns a city like Sacramento must face on a daily basis.

The pair re-aired the August 27 broadcast almost a month later, on September 26 so that people who had missed the first show could determine for themselves if the commotion caused was misguided or if Armstrong demnation. David Larson, the Chair of the Rainbow Chamber of Commerce called the pair "two middle-aged white guys who have built their own ivory tower coexisting in a state of hubris and have locked the tower door with a key made of genuine idiocy."

He states that while he believes Armstrong and Getty are "in their hearts not actually racists or biggots", that they should not have said some of the things they did on the air.

Larson also thinks that Mayor Fargo and her staff are taking things to extremes and that the radio station should not lose its license over this event.

While some feel that Mayor Fargo's letter-writing campaign is unjustified, they still think that Armstrong and Getty's comments were out of line. Others don't know what the fuss is about and think that groups are being too sensitive. The issue is not over, and no one knows yet how it will play

Opinion: We Are Different And We Are Similar

I have been a listener of the Armstrong and Getty show (KSTE 650 AM) since the second they turned their microphones on.

EWS FROM THE CAPITOL • NEWS FROM THE CAPITOL • NEWS FROM THE CAPITOL • NEWS FROM THE CAPI

I have always found their show to be informative, timely, and most of all, entertaining. Entertaining in the sense of humor and tongue in cheek commentary that enlivens the morning commute.

That is why the letters from the Mayor's office and Councilwoman Sheedy's office are most distressing. It is not enough that they misrepresented the content of the August 28, 2002 show. They then (at this writing) refused to give factual information supporting their position.

The Time Magazine article citing Sacramento as the most diverse city in the United States can be looked at showing a different set of challenges that a town with little or no diversity would experience. In the United States of America, to bring up the challenges that we as a community face should not be a reason to be labeled as "mean spirited", 'racist", or "constantly maligning" any or all communities

I heard much of the August 28 show and as a gay man found nothing demeaning in their comments. Generally, when referring to the gay community, I have found their comments right on the mark, timely and generally very fun-

To be so politically correct that we cannot take a minute to laugh at ourselves is an injustice that we do to ourselves. Especially from straight media hosts who support the gay community. They have never said anything (that I have heard) that is homophobic. They have plenty of times come out in support of domestic partner rights, the right of and lesbian individuals, and the right of all people to live together in this diverse community we call Sacramen-

They have done shows about the Gay community including gay panels, lesbian panels and the first gay men's kiss on the air. These shows were handled with great respect for the gay community and the only homophobia revealed was from that of the straight listeners to which Jack Armstrong and Joe Getty expressed disapproval of that listener's homophobia.

The gay community needs support from ALL the community, even the straight community. These two radio talk show hosts have proven that when all is said and done, they are with us and not against us. They may show their support through qualified jokes and tongue-in-cheek humor, but that is what I love about the show.

I am aware that Mayor Heather Fargo and her staff are friends to the gay community. That does not mean she is right and Armstrong and Getty are wrong. It is because the gay community respects Mayor Fargo, that her comments are even more devastating. We as a community listen to those who have gained our trust. If that community leader is not correct, many will still trust her words any-Who is being "maligned" then?

I respect Mayor Fargo, but in this case feel that her comments were not appropriate. It is because of this that I challenge the Mayor, Chuck Dalldorf (her chief of staff) or Councilwoman Sheedy to substantiate their comments to the FCC in some sort of public fo-

We have all laughed at others and ourselves in the community. Part of the diversity is the knowledge that we are different and that we are also similar. It is that similarity that brings us together and gives us a voice to express our opinion even if our neighbor doesn't share it.

A diverse community is most importantly expressed through diverse ideas that we all can respect. Expressing respectful opinions is not "racist" or "mean-spirited", and certainly not a reason for someone who does not share those opinions to be permanently silenced through loss of license and/or employment.

Armstrong and Getty have been friends to the gay and lesbian communities. It is time to stand up and support their rights to their opinions and to be friends to them. Respectfully submitted,

Jacob Streeter

Equal Benefits Bill

he California State Senate passed a gay rights bill that would prohibit the State of California from entering into contracts with businesses that offer spousal benefits but not domestic partner benefits. The legislation, AB 1080 was passed August 27. Twenty-one senators, all Democrats, voted in favor of the bill and 11 senators, all Republicans, voted against it.

The legislation is similar to San Francisco's Equal Benefits Ordinance that is frequently cited as the impetus for getting thousands of companies around the country to provide equal benefits to their employees in domestic partnerships. It is headed back to the California Assembly for concurrence with amendments adopted in the Senate, prior to being sent to the Governor Davis' desk for his signa-

The California Alliance for Pride & Equality (CAPE) is urging Davis to sign the bill. "CAPE is thrilled not only by the success our legislation had in the State Senate but also by the overwhelming majority of Senators who voted in favor of equality in the workplace," said CAPE's interim Executive Director Geoffrey Kors. "This would prohibit our tax dollars from going to companies that discriminate against their employees in samesex relationships."

Gay Marriage in Canada

court's decision to recognize the right of gay couples to marry will no doubt affect American laws and attitudes, GLBT advocates agreed. On July 12, three Ontario Superior Court judges unanimously ruled in Divisional Court that it is unconstitutional to prohibit gay couples from marrying.

Mike Marshall, executive di-

Marriage, said that the ruling will have a huge impact in the U.S. "It recognizes what more and more Californians are realizing: that the government has to stop discriminating against gay couples," he said. "And once those marriages begin to occur in Canada it will put huge pressure on courts here in the U.S. to rule in favor of lesbian and gay couples."

begin to happen for at least two years because the court suspended its order to allow Parliament and the provincial Legislature to change their laws. The federal government will probably appeal to the Supreme Court, but the Divisional Court's decision is expected to stand.

"It's all quite encouraging for the whole freedom to marry movement," Marshall said.

Governor Signs Hate Crime Legislation

overnor Gray Davis signed legislation on Sept 13 that provides hate crime victims with additional time to pursue a complaint when the identity of the perpetrator is determined more than a year after the hate crime occurred.

"The current one-year statute of limitations is inadequate time to conduct criminal investigations," Davis said. "This bill extends that time period to three years from the act of

Deliberations to Begin

Reverend Murder Case UN Mounts

he Sacramento Bee reported on September 24 that Frederick O'Neal Clark, the 36-year-old charged with murdering Rev. Ed Sherriff in the minister's home in Sacramento on Oct. 20, 1999, is on trial to determine his fate.

Clark, who stabbed the 68year-old gay man two dozen times, is accused of murdering Sherriff during a hate crime where he also committed burglary and robbery. These circumstances carry the death penalty.

soon start deliberations. If they conclude that Clark is guilty, the penalty phase of the trial will begin, and the jurors will decide if he should be sent to prison for life or die by lethal injection.

To defend his actions, Clark testified that his years in prison had filled him with an unstoppable rage that surfaced the night he killed Sherriff. He cited incidents of prison riots, racism, violence and corrupt prison officials.

During cross-examination, Clark acknowledged taking "sev-The jury, which includes eral thousands of dollars" from

Gay Priests

Wrongly Attacked

atholic Church officials are wrongly accusing gay priests of child sexual abuse according to a new report released by the Institute for Gay and Lesbian Strategic Studies (IGLSS).

The report outlines decades of research demonstrating that homosexual men are no more likely than heterosexual men to

One example cited in the IGLSS report occurred during the Papal Summit, the meeting called by the Pope to discuss this

During that meeting, Cardinal Francis George of Chicago stated, "There is a definite connection between homosexuality and sexual misconduct with minors if the conduct is with minor men...If you have an adult man having relations with an adolescent boy you've got homosexuality."

Appointed Speaker Pro Temp

J. Wesson Jr. (D-Los Angeles/Culver City) has appointed Assemblymember Christine Kehoe (D-San Diego) as Speaker pro Tempore of the California State As-

"Christine Kehoe represents the best of what California has to offer," Speaker Wesson said. "I am confident she will conduct the affairs of this House with grace and efficiency."

Kehoe was elected to repressembly Speaker Herb on November 7, 2000 and has served as Speaker pro Tempore Designate since February 2002.

> Prior to being elected as an Assemblymember, Kehoe was a San Diego City Council Member for seven years. During this time she was at the forefront on environmental issues, serving as chair of the Public Safety and Neighborhood Services Commit-

As a legislator, Christine works to ensure San Diego receives its fair share of state sent the 76th Assembly district funding for essential programs.

She has acquired more than $1 million to restore wetlands and wildlife habitat, and to improve water quality flows from the San Diego River to the ocean. She has also acquired $1 million for improvements to Balboa Park, one of San Diego's central points of community life.

Kehoe is the first member of the gay and lesbian community to be elected to public office in San Diego and the second woman to hold the important Speaker pro Tempore position in the state Assembly.

In the Life New Season Premiere

Life, a gay and lesbian television newsmagazine series, presents the new season premiere to viewers on KVIE, Channel 6. The one-hour program will consist of feature stories covering gays and lesbians transforming their struggles into activism in politics, the church, and even the theatre.

This edition includes a story on the Diane Whipple wrongful ew York, NY In the death lawsuit and its effect on California law regarding gay and lesbian couples. Other stories focus on two houses of worship for the gay community- the world's largest Christian church with a predominately GLBT congregation, Dallas' Cathedral of Hope, and the first gay and lesbian synagogue, Los Angeles' Beth Chayim Chadashim, as well as Family Fundamentals, a documentary by acclaimed filmmaker Arthur Dong that looks at conservative Christian families with openly gay children. Also, ITL follows the journey of the 1988 John Waters' classic film to its exciting musical premiere on Broadway.

In the Life includes reports on New Jersey same-sex couples suing for marriage rights, renowned choreographer Bill T. Jones' 50th birthday celebration in New York, and a preview of November's Gay Games VI in Sydney, Australia. Also, ITL reviews the significance of the Rainbow flag with its creator, Gilbert Baker.

In the Life chronicles the history and contemporary experiences of the gay and lesbian community and has received an Emmy award nomination for "outstanding educational pro-

Jazz Blows

Across Bay Area Waters

By Stefan Gruenwedel MGW Staff

oing strong for two decades, the 20th Anniversary San Francisco Jazz Festival graces the Bay Area from October 23 through November 10-a musical feast featuring the best in jazz. To honor its 20 years, the Festival runs for one week longer than usual, giving you even more time than before to select from a wide array of performances available, from famous masters to unknown newcomers who either pay tribute to jazz traditions or boldly reinterpret them to generate new musical ideas.

Some of the expected-great concerts include John Coltrane "Classic Quartet" veterans Elvin

Jones and McCoy Tyner, who influences from cultures around Swing" Lavay Smith and her play for Jones' 75th birthday at Nob Hill's Masonic Auditorium (10/27); sax stars Wayne Shorter and Branford Marsalis (10/26); and the singer/pianist duo of Shirley Horn and Ahmad Jamal

Tributes to past masters include avant-garde jazz saxophonist Ornette Coleman, appearing with his trio at Davies Symphony Hall (11/7). Boundary-changing flutist Yusef Lateef makes an appearance with longtime percussion collaborator Adam Rudolph at Yerba Buena Center for the Arts (YBCA) Theatre. "King of Swing" Benny Goodman receives a tribute at Goodman's own favorite venue, the Mark Hopkins, atop Nob Hill the world. Endlessly eclectic composer Hermeto Pascoal gives a captivating solo performance, and the Banda Mantiqueira band revels in its dazzling combination of bossa nova and big-band jazz in a rare appearance (10/28).

Jazz constantly adopts new

Wildly inventive, fun to hear, and hard-to-classify, Tin Hat Trio are joined this year by cutting-edge orchestra Japonize Elephants at YBCA (10/31).

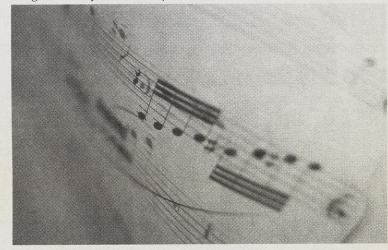

The great Bobby McFerrin sings in a "surprise party" at the Masonic with guest stars whose identity will be kept secret even from McFerrin until they take the stage (11/9).

Imagine this: tenor sax great James Carter and Tuvan throatsinging ensemble Huun-Huur-Tu play Grace Cathedral (11/1). And the Bay Area's "Queen of Red Hot Skillet Lickers and the Quintet of the Hot Club of San Francisco embark on a day of swingin' on the Bay aboard the luxurious San Francisco Spirit yacht (11/10).

As they say, there's something for everyone at all price levels and degrees of snobbery. Tickets range from about $25 to $35 for most seats; more for Gold Circle seats. Available in person at the SFJAZZ Store, 3 Embarcadero Center, Lobby Level, and at www.sfjazz.org.

ixty-five percent of all Americans state that they would not change their opinions of "favorite" male or female professional athletes if the athletes revealed that they are gay, a national opinion study by Witeck-Combs Communications revealed. When asked how they thought "other sports fans would feel" toward an openly gay sports figure, 78% said they believed "others" would have less favorable opinions.

Witek suggested two possible explanations for the gap between one's own views and those thought to be held by others. It may be that individuals may decide to conceal their true homophobic attitudes. Or it could be that sports fans are more accepting than the public perceives them to be.

Dan Woog, author of Jocks, a book about gays in sports, supports the latter. "Clearly the 'last closet'-the door to the locker room-is opening up," he Chinese activist freed...

Chinese AIDS activist who had been held in custody for speaking out about the country's AIDS epidemic and charged with leaking "state secrets," was released late last month after confessing to the charges against him, says China's official media. The man, Wan Yanhai, was held by Chinese authorities for a month, sparking a wave of condemnation from international rights groups. The 38-year-old is the founder and driving force behind the country's AIDS Action Project, a private group pushing for the rights of people with AIDS in China. It is expected, says his wife - who currently attends a Los Angeles univerthat he will spend more of his time now in the United States. During his detention, he was selected by the New York-based Human Rights Watch and the Canadian HIV/AIDS Legal Network to receive their joint Award for Action on HIV/AIDS and Human Rights.

Stronger warnings wanted for Tylenol, Motrin, other drugs..

Concerned that thousands of Americans are inadvertently taking toxic and potentially fatal doses of acetaminophen ^ the main ingredient in Tylenol, Percocet, nite-time cold formulas, Vicodin, as well as nearly 200 other over-the-counter cold and headache remedies ^ a panel of scientists has advised the Food and Drug Administration to use stronger and clearer warnings on labels. More than 100 people die, and more than 2000 are hospitalized each year, as a result of liver damage from unintentional overdoses of ac etaminophen, not realizing that mixing the drugs with one another or with alcoholic beverages can seriously endanger them. The panel is looking at possible label changes for aspirin and ibuprofen, the main ingredient in drugs like Advil and Motrin, to warn the public more specifically that bleeding ulcers and gastro-intestinal bleeding are possible side effects.

People with HIV must be especially aware of the dangers of mixing over-the-counter meds or healthfood supplements or alcohol with their HIV drugs. It's very easy to take a couple of headache tablets, or grab some cough syrup, when you're not feeling well. But be sure to let your physician know about anything you are taking that is not part of your prescribed HIV regi-

Doctors, activists discouraged by Bush's

A national gathering of doctors, social workers, and people with HIV attending the US Conference on AIDS in Anaheim in Sept booed and jeered White House AIDS Policy Director Dr. Joseph O'Neill when he spoke of President Bush's stance on AIDS prevention programs heavy on teaching abstinence and no support for preventative measures such as safe sex education or needle exchange programs. AIDS health care workers criticized Bush's policies as shortsighted and potentially dangerous, with no consideration being given to future generations. Working it out and making it happen...

China, in great need of less expensive AIDS drugs but committed to honoring the patents of drug manufacturers, has been able to authorize a Chinese drug company to make a low-cost, generic copy of ddl. US drug maker Bristol-Myers Squibb holds a patent in China for ddl. But a Bristol-Myers spokesperson says it only covers the drug in tablet form, and since the generic version will be a powder it is exempt from any patent infringement. Leno targets nonoxynol-9...

San Francisco Supervisor Mark Leno has requested legislation that would ban the sale of sexual lubricants containing nonoxynol-9 in the The spermicide, which could kill HIV in a test tube and was subsequently added to many lubes, was hailed in the early days of the epidemic as a breakthrough, and people were encouraged to purchase lubes containing the ingredient. But studies two years ago by the CDC and World Health Organization found the spermicide could actually increase the risk of contracting HIV. While information has been disseminated regarding the reversal of the original guidelines, the extra precaution wanted by Leno would provide a heavy layer of protection for those not yet aware that nonoxynol-9 lubricants are, as he says, "a danger to public health.

Pot is brewing on federal vs. state enforcement...

Many of those with cancer, AIDS and other diseases say using marijuana eliminates the nausea that comes with some of their treatments or medications, and thus helps them regain their appetites. Proposition 215, approved by California voters in 1996, sanctions marijuana use with a doctor's permission, but federal law grants no such exemptions. That conflict has produced some tense relationships between federal and California authorities, and increasing protests from public officials across California in protest of the hard-ball federal response to California's laws about medicinal pot for people with a medical need.

'I don't want any (federal) Drug Enforcement Administration people in my county," says the district attorney in Mendocino County... "(and) I will not cooperate with any DEA people in my county.' "When our government becomes the aggressor against powerless people," says a Santa Cruz County su-pervisor, "I feel I have a higher moral obligation to stand with the powerless." California's Attorney General has reportedly written to U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft and DEA Chief Asa Hutchinson, asking for a meeting of federal, state and local officials to discuss what he called the DEA's "punitive expeditions" against growers who are following California state law.

With a dozen Santa Cruz officials applauding, about 100 people with medical marijuana prescriptions approached a table outside City Hall early last month and chose from an array of pot products-to-go muffins, mixtures, and small baggies of the weed itself. The Santa Cruz Vice Mayor said it's "absolutely loathsome" that the federal government is spending money and energy on this issue. A DEA official would not comment on possible reprisals, but said he was "shocked and appalled that elected city officials would choose to flaunt federal law."

San Diego says it proposes to set up a program to issue identification cards to people who use medicinal marijuana so they can avoid arrest. After eligibility has been verified, those with the ID cards will be allowed to possess up to an ounce of marijuana under the city's "Medicinal Cannabis Voluntary Verification Card Program." To prevent fraud, the card will include a photo and a 24_hour hot line number so police can make sure the card hasn't been stolen. The program costs would be offset by charging $25 per card.

San Francisco city leaders were part of a jeering crowd that greeted the head of the Drug Enforcement Agency during a September visit. Demonstrators blew kazoos and chanted "Go away DEA." It happened just hours after drug agents raided a San Francisco club that supplies marijuana to people with AIDS and cancer. Agents seized 600 pot plants and arrested four people. The city's Board of Supervisors president calls the DEA an obnoxious, grandstanding" agency.

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors voted in mid-September to put a measure on the November ballot that would have the city explore growing its own marijuana and distributing it to seriously ill people who have doctors' permits. Supervisor Mark Leno said California voters have made it clear that they support medical marijuana, but still it is illegal under federal law. A spokesman for the DEA's regional office in San Francisco said the agency will enforce federal law

"whether or not it's popular."

A marijuana "spinoff" may be on its way - scientists have been trying to create a drug that taps into the pain relieving properties of pot without the feeling of getting "high." Researchers at the Univ of Massachusetts say the compound, called ajulemic acid, has produced encouraging results in animal studies of pain and inflammation. It is undergoing early human tests in a group of 21 people in Germany with chronic pain and could be available by prescription within two to three years, the scientists say.

In what may be a first since California voters passed the medicinal marijuana law six years ago, a Sacramento man is suing his former employer for firing him because he uses doctor-prescribed pot for a disabling back injury that he incurred in the Air Force. The 40-year-old man is seeking more than $100,000 in damages from a local telecommunications firm. The company, Raging Wire Telecommunications, says it' committed to a drug-free work environment, and is certain their action against the man will be upheld in court because it was in compliance with both state and federal law. However, the California Supreme Court says medicinal marijuana is as legal as any other prescribed medication, and employers are not in the habit of telling an employee they cannot take a prescription. Prior to being hired, the man took a mandatory drug test for employment, and provided company officials with a copy of his physician's prescription for marijuana use. He had told his employers that conventional pain relievers did not work for him, and that he would not smoke marijuana at work, nor would he come to work under its influence. He would smoke it at his home every week, or every three weeks, depending on Muppet makes debut in South Africa...

Education officials and AIDS activists applauded the producers of South Africa's version of "Sesame Street" last month as they unveiled Kami, a mustard colored furry creature who likes nature and who happens to be the world's first Muppet with HIV. The character was created at the urging of the South African government, which helps sponsor the show, to reduce stigma about HIV/AIDS. In her debut, Kami wanders onto Sesame Street and wonders nervously if the other residents of the street will want to play with her. The other Muppets enthusiastically welcome her into their playhouse. Kami, whose name means acceptance in the local Tswana language, will teach the program's three- to seven-year-old viewers about HIV as well as about coping with loss.

FDA approves Hepsera for hepatitis B..

The FDA has approved adefovir dipivoxil for use by people with hepatitis B. It will be sold by Gilead as Hepsera, and will be available immediately. It is the first new therapy in years for the estimated 1.2 million Americans who have the infection. Interferon and lamivudine have thus far been the only other medicines available but resistance and intolerance of side effects were issues for many, so physicians have long wanted another option. Adefovir is the drug that was originally was tested as a possible treatment for HIV, but the FDA rejected that use because the high doses required proved toxic to people's kidneys. Given at much lower doses to treat hepatitis, the risk of kidney damage is also much lower, but still possible (perhaps in the range of 5 percent of users), but this was weighed against the finding that liver cirrhosis improved in 56 percent to 66 percent of people test-

Fall: An Opportunity to Reflect and Contemplate

By Dr. Jeffrey Chernin MGW Staff

recently talked with a friend who was complaining about this time of year. She doesn't like fall, she said, because it is a time of bad memories of starting school, the leaves turn brown, and it means that the holidays aren't far

I understood what my friend was telling me. I also feel melancholy at this time of year; I have occasional thoughts of loss and that the year is almost over-again. Looking back at the years of getting prepared for the frigid mid-western weather, it meant shoveling snow, stuck cars, and sub-freezing temperatures—in other words, misery was around the corner.

Many of us also become introspective at this time of year. Introspective thoughts turn to missed opportunities, words we wish we hadn't said, and words we didn't say that maybe we wish we had.

m was}$ thinking on my morning walk, however, that since fall for many of us is a time of introspection, it is also an opportunity. Fall is an opportunity to reflect on our personal accomplishments, in addition to failings, and accomplishments we have made as a community. It is a time when many GLBT individuals turn or return to therapy for assistance, which means opportunities for personal growth.

It is also the chance to take specific instances of misfortune during the year and turn them into opportunities for learning. For example, for those of you with a recent divorce/break up, it is initially devastating whether you are the person leaving or the person left behind. Fall then becomes the time you reflect on the past, you will realize that you're finding the same sorts of partners, and you may discover that you have a pattern of being attracted to certain kinds of people.

Recognizing that there's a destructible pattern in your life is half the battle in changing it. Once you realize that you have a pattern, you can begin the task of developing insight into why you have the relationship patterns you do. And once you outgrow your old relationship patterns, you can find yourself in a more healthy and loving rela-

I attended a recent seminar where one of the participants had just that opportunity. He lover had an alcohol problem that had slowly been getting unbearable. He went on to say that he tried everything, including threatening to leave him, to make him stop.

Nearly every other participant suggested that he take care of himself and, if nothing else worked, then it was time to end to regroup. Perhaps this fall, as the relationship. He protested, saying that the years of being in the relationship was an "investment," and he didn't want to lose it.

He was challenged not to look at his relationship as some kind of investment or bank account. One participant said that we reinvent ourselves every day, and that the distressed participant is not the same person he was when the relationship started, and neither is his lover. The participant looked dazed, but they had gotten through to him, and he was now taking the first step of challenging his pre-existing notions about relationships as some sort of investment.

As another example, maybe you recently had mentioned to the group that his a step back in your career or your job. When a client of psychologist Carl Jung would lose his or her job, he would, much to the client's surprise, offer his congratulations over the misfortune. Why would he do this? Because he saw any loss as an opportunity for growth, reflection, and new opportunities for each individual.

Fall can be an opportunity to take a proverbial step back before you take the next steps forward. After looking at fall as a time for introspection and ultimately growth, you can see it as a necessary time of reflection before renewal. You can use this time to ask yourself: Am I treating myself and others poorly, without respect and affection? Am I drinking or drugging too much? Am I too judgmental? If so, how can I treat myself and others better?

Other questions you can ask yourself at this time of year include: Am I willing to stay in an abusive relationship or with an alcoholic, drug, or sex addicted lover? Will I stay in a job with a company or job that I am not happy in? Fall is the opportunity to contemplate whichever questions you see in your life, whatever adjustments you think need to be made to have a happier, more fulfilling life.

On the 13th and 27th of each month. We need to double and triple check the flats!

MULTI-MEDIA/VIDEO PRODUCERS

For MGW's 25th Anniversary (to be celebrated in February 2003). We are looking for college interns to make a video of MGW past staff, politicians, volunteers, reader's thoughts and images for a multi-media event.

MUSIC REVIEWERS

Creative people needed to give their opinion on all the music CD's we get here. And keep the CD's
